

Jon Robbeson

Vice Chair, AusIMM Sydney Branch

Jon is currently the Vice Chair of the AusIMM Sydney Branch and an organiser of this event.

Jon takes a long-term view on project development. It's not about now, it's about the future, it's about being able to create intergenerational value a sustainable way.

With two decades of hands-on technical, corporate and director experience throughout the mining value chain he has held senior technical titles and board positions in both Australian and international multi-nationals through to small cap explorers where he specialised his skills adaptive leadership and project development.

Jon holds a BSc. (Hons) from Rhodes University; a Masters in Economic Geology from the University of Tasmania; as well as a Masters' of Mining Engineering and an Executive MBA from the University of New South Wales.

His career path has afforded him an in-depth knowledge in being able to manage greenfield projects through discovery, feasibility, approvals, development, construction, commissioning, into profitable operation and sale. All these steps encompass their own risks and Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) challenges for all stakeholders which need to be understood, continuously monitored, clearly communicated, and actively managed for the best future outcomes.

Jon has experience leading high performing teams and he believes that when provided the right opportunity, people, through the power of effective team collaboration can all achieve incredible things. As a passionate, lifelong campaigner in the resources industry, Jon is also an active voice for industry professionals and student cohorts in New South Wales.
